Re-Learning to be Human in Global Times
A Message to Members of Public Opinion, Social Action and Education
The 21st century challenges all people to rethink their relationship with technology, with each other, and with the planet. It is not just the digital revolution that is reshaping our lives, but also the global challenges of climate change, inequality, and the loss of biodiversity. We must learn to be human again, to reconnect with our shared humanity and to work together to build a better world for all.
